Market review

The September quarter was a very weak one for Equity markets the world over, with the MSCI World index falling by 17.1% over the period. The Australian market fared better than most with the ASX200 Accumulation index down by 11.6%, which was the worst quarter since the nadir of the crisis at the end of 2008.

The market has once again been dominated by macro events, despite the year end reporting season in August. The beginning of the period saw investor confidence significantly dented by the political stalemate in Washington around raising the debt ceiling, with a deal eventually getting approved but not without enduring reputational damage. Firmly consolidating this negative sentiment was the fact that US economic data released in early August was very weak. The idea that any weakness was being caused by temporary factors and that the recovery was still on track was firmly brushed aside as investors contemplated the reality of a persistently slower growth environment. As a result, equities across the globe sold off sharply.

The US Federal Reserve implemented its USD400bn 'Operation Twist', which is designed to reduce the longer dated treasury yields by increasing the Fed's holdings in longer dated treasuries and reducing shorter dated notes. This provided some temporary respite but overall the market reaction was underwhelming and the rally short-lived as attention moved back to the well documented European, and in particular Italian and Spanish, debt issues.

Political leaders within the Eurozone continued to demonstrate that their own political agendas were higher on the priority list than agreeing and implementing a workable solution to the debt problem, which resulted in the equities sell-off gather strong momentum in September. There was no respite from China either, with increasing speculation in the market that there would be a 'hard landing', with softening equity data and increased concern around the property sector.

The RBA held the cash rate at 4.75% throughout the period, in what continues to be lacklustre domestic economy. Themes remained consistent in each of the accompanying statements with the Reserve Bank noting the unsettled nature of the financial markets due to sovereign debt and banking concerns in Europe and the prospect of slower economic growth in the United States.

Fund performance

The portfolio underperformed its benchmark in September quarter. The quarter was a very weak one for risk assets, particularly shares & property, with Australian shares down 11.65% and Global Property down 15.24%. International equities held up a little better, falling 8.0%, due mainly to the fall in the Australian dollar offsetting losses in the offshore share markets. Government bonds continued to rally in the September quarter, contributing to a 4.6% return for Australian Fixed Interest and a 5.35% for International Fixed Interest.

In a relative sense, our underlying active strategies were mixed with Australian equities adding value and International Equities detracting value in September quarter. Our asset allocation position also slightly detracted value.

Strategy & outlook

The key influence on the Australian share market continues to be the global macro environment. While we expect there to be a recovery from the aggressive sell-off we saw in September, there looks to be little imminent chance of a meaningful and long lasting reduction in the levels of volatility to buoy equity investors. The key issue remains Europe and while the economic situation there remains dire, the element that continues to frighten markets the most remains a now seemingly entrenched lack of confidence in the key political protagonists agreeing (let alone implementing) a timely and workable solution to the problem. The current state of play is there is an initiative to provide the under funded European Financial Stability Facility (EFSF), with a 'first-loss guarantee' facility that would effectively insure a proportion of the face value of a sovereign bonds issue with the aim of re-instigating investor confidence in that sovereign issuer. Importantly, there are more meaningful initiatives to recapitalise European banks and clear consensus that action must be taken to avoid full contagion into the banking sector. Progress is being made but it is not quick enough to provide sustained confidence for markets.

In the U.S, data has improved to the extent that the complete stand-still scenario that some were portraying back in August has not eventuated. However, there is broader acceptance that overall growth will be sluggish for some time. From where we are today, we are faced with a long period of lacklustre growth and it remains to be seen what further initiatives the government and Federal reserve can implement to jolt the economy.

In China, recent data suggests something of a slow-down, with softening data, particularly in the property sector. We are definitely not in the 'hard-landing camp' and would point out that the imbalances in the Chinese economy that had such a painful impact in 2008 are not nearly so evident today. In particular, growth has been slower in light of more restrictive policy and they are running about half the surplus that they were 3 years ago.

The Reserve Bank has yet not been able to gauge the extent that the slowing growth in Europe and the US will have on emerging market economies. It would be naive to suggest that they will come through unscathed and it is likely that China's export-led economy will start to moderate as export volumes decline. Declining commodity prices may also provide an indication of slowing emerging markets and may also result in a paring back of mining investment intentions in Australia, although the investment pipeline remains large. Australian households have remained cautious, a behaviour that is only likely to be exacerbated by a weakening labour market and a high level of financial market volatility.

Fundamentally, we continue to be negative in the near to mid-term on credit markets as global growth appears to have markedly slowed. Whilst corporate balance sheets are markedly more robust than a few years ago, we believe that the market will continue to experience ongoing gyrations, typically with credit either widening or the market losing liquidity, until headline risk dissipates.
